Structuring
the day around a timetable

During lockdown, some children missed having a timetable to structure their day. Others felt freer in the absence of it. How did you feel about it? Did you miss structuring your day around a timetable or was it better without one?

Homeschooling and attention

“I like normal school more because during homeschool my parents get really stressed trying to juggle the[ir] jobs as well as being teachers, so I end up getting less attention than in school.”

What about you? Did you feel similar or different to this student? How was homeschooling for you?

A classroom full of life

During lockdown, many classrooms remained empty for long periods. What makes your classroom feel 'a classroom full of life'? What sounds does a lively classroom make? How does it look? And then even think about how your classroom might smell?

Finding it difficult to learn in noisy environments

Some children concentrate better in loud and busy classrooms, but others find it hard to concentrate and learn in a noisy environment. And you? Does your classroom feel too noisy when you try to concentrate? Or maybe not?

The
hecticness
of being part of a busy school

One thing that many students (and teachers!) did not miss from school during lockdown was the hecticness of being part of a busy school where everything runs too fast. Do you feel similar to them? Is everything running fast in your school or do you feel you have time to slow down and relax during the school-day?

Going on school trips

We discussed with many children about their experiences from school during COVID-19. Many of them said that one of the things they missed the most was extracurricular activities and going on school trips. Did you go on school trips? Are school trips important to you? Why?

Online learning

“Online lessons can be a little bit draining, quite boring some of the time. It's quite hard to understand just from online learning, and also it's harder to ask questions, and ask for help online.”

For some children, online learning during lockdown felt tiring and difficult. For others, they enjoyed it more because they could lie back on their beds and do classes in their pyjamas. But some other children could not learn online at all because they had little or no access to electronic devices or good internet connection, or because it was hard to concentrate with so many family members around all day. How was online learning for you?

Sharing your work

“I miss how we meet in classes and be able to show off how we like what we've learned and things like that, our class assemblies.”

Is it also important to you to share your work with others and show what you've learned? While schools were closed, did you come up with other ways to share your work with your friends and teachers? Or was it difficult to do that?

Learning with others

“I miss spontaneous conversations that help you learn.”

Are you also learning through spontaneous conversations with your friends? Did you come up with other ways to learn during lockdown?

Friendship, hugging and meeting

NO HUGGING

"[I miss] being able to just go there [to school] and just hug my friends."

"I miss like ehm like having lunch and my friends and like spending time with my friends at school."

"...the tactile kind of connections. I really miss that."

Is hugging your friends important to you too? How does a world with 'no hugging' feel? How does it look like?

Rules, rules, rules

The pandemic surrounded us with rules of things we shouldn't do.

Which of these rules do you remember the most?

Which rule(s) would you like to change?

If you could create your own COVID-19 rules, which ones would they be?

Fighting with friends

“[One thing I did not miss from school is] when my friends when they like get ... into a like a fight thing with different people because then it just ruins things that's happening with us like playing or something.”

How does it make you feel when people are falling out and you have to sort the situation?

Doing art

“I think sometimes, well in our school they keep saying that we're gonna do art ... and we never actually get to do art which is annoying and then we have to do like English in the afternoons which is annoying.”

Do you like doing art at school? Were you able to do it when schools were closed? How often would you like to do art in school?

Being told off by teachers

“[I don’t miss] getting to the lesson on time and being told-off for being late.”

Do you feel like you’re being told off by your teachers too often? What are the reasons that a teacher tells you off? How do you feel about it?

Feeling pulled away from friends

Did you also feel pulled away from your friends during the pandemic? Could you describe what it was that separated you from your friends?
